

How Credible is Your Information Source?

This form will help you find information about _____.

You will be looking at Internet websites to answer the question below. You need to assess whether or not the information provided is credible and accurate. In order to do this, you need to consider who created the website, and what is their purpose in writing the information.

Question:
	Site 1	Site 2
Website Title URL
Who created this website (organization, author etc.)?
Why did they create it? Check all that apply	<input type="radio"/> To provide factual information <input type="radio"/> To influence the reader's opinion <input type="radio"/> To sell a product or service <input type="radio"/> I do not know	<input type="radio"/> To provide factual information <input type="radio"/> To influence the reader's opinion <input type="radio"/> To sell a product or service <input type="radio"/> I do not know
How credible and accurate do you think the information is?	<input type="radio"/> Very accurate <input type="radio"/> Somewhat accurate <input type="radio"/> Not very accurate <input type="radio"/> I do not know	<input type="radio"/> Very accurate <input type="radio"/> Somewhat accurate <input type="radio"/> Not very accurate <input type="radio"/> I do not know
What did you learn?

Developed from template by The American Physiological Society, 2011